

CaDansa

Balfolk Festival

OCTOBER 2017

DAILY

23 OCTOBER

CaDansa is over again. Luckily we have all the good memories to take with us. All the glitter will remind us of CaDansa the coming week and we are looking forward to all the CaDansa flowers in spring!

END RITUAL

The festival has come to its end and the spirit of CaDansa will be spread all across Europe. Seeds will be planted to remind us of all the nice people, music, dancing and more CaDansa Magic. They will not float on the wind as seeds do normally, but they will be brought by you, all the visitors of the festival. We gave everyone who was there at the end of the festival an envelop with flower seeds. Thank you for putting all your good memories in them and sharing them during the final Bourrée en Ronde.

This was supposed to be the farewell ritual, but luckily it turned out that during the festival seeds were planted to continue the festival! It might have been Louise's last CaDansa, but it won't be THE last CaDansa. Let's spread the soul of CaDansa by sharing the photos of the flowers that will come from the seeds.

Did you see the sound engineers in the back? They had to work really hard during CaDansa, but they made themselves comfortable as well... Their soundboard includes buttons for:

- coffee (mild or strong)
- insta-teleporting stage manager
- esc. from jail
- ordering groceries
- waking hugo
- and so on

RUMOURS

- Do you know this festival problem where you don't know whether to say goodmorning or goodnight when it is 6 am and you are not sleeping yet? Adopt the "good mornight"!
- Fulco, one of the organisers, danced only one dance... so next year we will make sure that he won't be able to leave the dancefloor!
- We searched for #Cadansa and #Cadansa2017 on Instagram and found some nice photos. Amongst them a photo made at the farm the Horsterhof from Lornalowenherz. That looks very cosy! We also like the very artistic one, made during the volunteer heads up... it looks like the holy trinity of CaDansa! by chaya.line

- At 9 pm a group of volunteers was having dinner in a 90% clean building...Wow! And the storage we were about to cancel is VERY full again...
- It was a great honour to have a starwhale at CaDansa, a mysterious creature that wanders through the universe. It will continue its travels now and wishes us all the best.

Do you have feedback for CaDansa? We would like to hear it. You can e-mail your feedback to info@cadansa.nl

STARWHALE

Balaena Stellaris

Range: Throughout the universe

Habitat: Barred spiral galaxies like the Milky way

Size: Ranges from the size of a terran whale to up to 5 times that size

Diet: Mostly stardust and spacekrill

Top speed: Faster than the speed of light

The starwhale is an alien species that roams most of our known universe. Like terran whales, starwhales are intelligent creatures that often exhibit some form of emotion. Unlike other space monsters, they often act with a purpose that goes beyond "eat space people, wreck ship". Not all starwhales are aimless wanderers through the endless sea of space. Some have chosen to take on passengers, becoming living ships, ferrying their crew across the universe. While starwhale fishing is now illegal in most of the universe, the starwhale almost went extinct a few thousand years ago.

Famous starwhales: Starship UK (Doctor Who), Mobius Dick (Futurama), several nameless starwhales (Star Trek), The Improbable Whale (Hitchhikers guide to the galaxy), Willxyz (South Park), Moya (Farscape)
